Section 156A(1) of the Local Government Act 1993 (the Act) requires a council to prepare a Regulatory Impact Statement (RIS) in respect of any by-law it intends to make.

However, sub-section (1A) removes the requirement for a RIS for any by-law where:

- the purpose is to repeal another by-law
- it is a minor or technical amendment to an existing by-law
- it does not significantly alter the purpose or effect of the existing by-law
- it does not alter the impact on the public of the existing by-law

Whether the by-law falls into one of the categories above is a judgement to be made by the council seeking to make the by-law.

Steps in making a by-law for which a RIS is not required:

- the council passes a formal resolution by an absolute majority of its intention to make a by-law
- the by-law receives certification by a legal practitioner and the general manager of the council as required
- the by-law is sealed by the council
- the by-law is published in the Tasmanian Government Gazette by the council
- the by-law is made available for purchase

- the by-law is submitted to the Joint Standing Committee on Subordinate Legislation
- the by-law is tabled in parliament
- a copy of the by-law, as published in the Gazette, the certification under Section 162 of the Act, and a statement explaining the purpose and effect of the by-law and the outcomes of public consultation are sent to the Local Government Division
- copies of the by-law are to be kept by the general manager of the council and made available for inspection or purchase by the public at a charge no greater than is needed to recoup the cost of providing the document
- any by-law which affects the conduct of the public requires notice to be provided in appropriate locations and setting out the purpose and effect of the by-law and advising of penalties for breach of the by-law
